Aim and scope

The Latin American Journal of Science Education (LAJSE) is an open access journal published biannually by the Latin American Science Education Research Association. The official website of the journal is <http://www.lajse.org>. All papers are subject to rigorous peer review and the decision to publish is based on the reviewers' comments. All papers should include a comprehensive, up-to-date literature review and the experimental results presented should demonstrate a significant advance over the current state of the art. LAJSE covers the following topics: Learning and teaching process in science. New trends on teaching science. The nature of science: History, Philosophy and Sociology of science. Curriculum in science and educational policies. Cultural topics on Science Education.

Manuscript submission

All submissions to LAJSE must be sent by e-mail to journal.lajse@gmail.com using the Word template and directions given in the link 'Manuscript submission' in <http://www.lajse.org>. We accept contributions in Portuguese, English and Spanish; in any case, an English abstract should be included.
